MTSS READING

Springtime is fast approaching, and with that comes school spring break. Whether your family plans to spend the week at home or traveling, here is a list of 5 activities to keep children engaged in literacy throughout the break from school.

1. Play a Game as a Family

Playing games is a great way to build literacy skills. The conversation that goes on while playing games can help children build language.

2. Library Visit

Take the extra time with your children to become more familiar with the free resources your local library offers. Libraries offer children's programs that support reading.

3. Write About Outdoor Play

Take your child to a neighborhood playground to have fun and get some physical exercise. When you get home, ask him to write about his favorite part of your time outdoors.

4. Look for a Little Free Library

A Little Free Library is a small container of free books that can be exchanged within a community. These community sharing libraries help motivate readers, young and old.

5. Record Your Own Audiobook

Let your child have a turn reading aloud by making an audiobook.
